

87% of Britons have not planned their digital legacy

Have you planned your digital legacy?

When we lose a loved one, we often find comfort in the memories they leave behind. However, with many of these memories now stored digitally, modern families are in real danger of losing this precious shared history after a death.

With so much invested in the storage of our memories online, it is vital we take steps to ensure access to these treasured items are passed on after we die.

OUR MEMORIES STORED DIGITALLY

- 2.43 billion people use a social network (1.86 billion of them are on Facebook).
- iTunes had over 800 million accounts in 2014, with more than 25 billion songs downloaded.

Digital assets and digital presence

Your digital legacy is made up of digital assets and digital presence.

Digital Assets - include music, films or books that are held digitally. These are often licensed to the user and can be lost when that person dies. It was widely reported in 2012, that Hollywood actor Bruce Willis was going to great lengths to ensure his iTunes music collection could be passed on after his death.

Digital Presence - includes any social media, email or e-commerce accounts.

Policies regarding these accounts after death are constantly evolving.

How do I protect my digital legacy?

The Law Society urge people to leave clear instructions about what should happen to their digital assets after their death. It said that having a list of online accounts would "make it easier for family members to piece together your digital legacy, adhere to your wishes and could save time and money."

This is why we created a Life Organiser.

Life Organiser

A Life Organiser is a document, alongside your Will, which provides an essential overview of all the information needed for your loved ones to correctly manage your affairs.

Our Life Organiser covers numerous areas, such as;

- Personal & household info
- Vehicles & finances
- Passwords & funeral wishes

Our Life Organiser provides a place where you can keep a record of what digital assets you have and how to manage and close digital accounts.

How we can help

Along with the preparation of fixed-fee Wills and Life Organisers, our team can provide advice on protecting your digital legacy. We can also advise on how to deal with someone's affairs after they have died. Call us on 01525 450520 or you can visit our website www.ommlaw.co.uk
